Staff Picks

Looking for something new? Here's what we've been reading, watching, or listening to...

Oscar suggests:

The Adventure Zone, Vol. 1 by: Clint McElroy & Carey Pietsch

The Adventure Zone: Here There Be Gerblins is a graphic novel adaptation of the first arc of the Dungeons & Dragons podcast of the same name hosted by the three brothers McElroy and their dad. Even if you've never listened to the podcast before, this book would be an excellent introduction to the wild and wacky adventures of Taako the elf wizard, Merle the dwarf cleric, and Magnus the human fighter. The second volume Murder on the Rockport Limited will release this July.

Ann suggests:

How to Walk Away by: Katherine Center

To paraphrase John Lennon, life is what happens while you're making other plans. That's the premise of this book. The courage exhibited by the protagonist Margaret Jacobsen and the support of family, friends and her physical therapist as a result of injuries due to a plane crash make for a feel-good story. Center keeps it light enough to keep the tears in check and hope alive - a good read.

Gretchen suggests:

All We Ever Wanted by: Emily Giffin

This was a book I couldn't put down! The story centers around a teenager's unfortunate choices at a party one night and the far reaching consequences of those choices on several families involved. What I really liked was the soul searching, introspective, and thought-provoking way these characters traverse this challenge. This is a timely book dealing with the ramifications of social media in modern life and the current "me too" movement activity. This book will definitely make you think.
